

Wayang Wong Sispri - Link

Wayang Wong Sispri-link (Student Observer of the Environment) has the concept of "Eco School" which is inviting school children to care about the environment and teach dance arts with the aim of preserving regional culture.

"By cultivating environmental awareness from an early age in children, of course, it will increase the opportunity to create a more environmentally friendly lifestyle when they grow up".

Wayang Wong is one of several Balinese performance art form which melds dance, drama and music. This dance is performed by a number of people using masks. Tejakula Wayang Wong is world heritage listed and has been recognized by UNESCO. It has been also performed in Sweden.

See the children's activities of collecting plastic waste from their homes and practicing the Wayang Wong sacred dance.

Children take part in dance classes for free, but every time they take part in a dance class, they have to bring plastic waste from their home or from school, so, this activity is to train children to care about waste and help preserve culture.
